E-BOOKS TO EXPAND BY 30,000

ACA DEAL WITH JSTOR MAKES PURCHASE POSSIBLE

Through an arrangement with JSTOR, the Appalachian College Association’s (ACA) Bowen Central Library of Appalachia has agreed to establish a fund that will allow the ACA’s thirty-five member libraries to secure e-books through a Demand-Driven Acquisition program.

As an ACA member, Montgomery Library will be able to acquire more than 30,000 scholarly titles from publishers such as Yale University Press, Harvard University Press, University Press of Kentucky, University of North Carolina Press, Hebrew University Press, Edinburgh University Press, and Brookings Institution Press.

Under JSTOR’s Demand-Driven Acquisition program, the purchase of a book is triggered whenever a page or chapter in a title is viewed by students, faculty members, staff people, or other authorized users of library services. When the number of views reaches a pre-established threshold, Montgomery Library will then have perpetual access to the book. There are no limits to downloading or printing e-book chapters from JSTOR (http://www.jstor.org). A user can access the books the same way as he or she does journals on JSTOR. The titles in exactly like Both book and journal content is integrated in JSTOR’s databases, which allows cross-searching full texts for subject matter by a researcher. JSTOR has articles from more than 2,000 scholarly journals online.

Faculty members will be able to easily incorporate a single chapter or an entire e-book into their courses. The platform will allow an instructor to add the stable URL for the chapter or e-book to their syllabus. E-books will be available to students 24/7. Students can access the material on campus and by remote access, of course, but there are, also, no limits to simultaneous use.

BEULAH CAMPBELL COLLECTION CHOSEN FOR DIGITIZATION: ACCESS THROUGH ARTSTOR

Montgomery Library (ML) has been selected to participate in a special project that will allow digital access to items in the Beulah Campbell Collection.

The Council of Independent Colleges (CIC) chose ML to digitize and share original works of art from Campbell’s Collection as part of the CIC’s SharedShelf program.

The SharedShelf program is part of the CIC’s Consortium on Digital Resources for Teaching and Research. As a member of the Consortium, CU is given a subscription to SharedShelf, an Artstor platform that allows universities to provide access to their own collections.

SharedShelf will facilitate the digitization and online access to the Campbell Collection, which features a selection of Campbell’s personal collection of illustrations from children’s books.

The Campbell Collection is used by CU’s School of Education and is of interest to faculty and researchers at other institutions.

Following the project’s completion, interested academics will be able to easily access portions of her collection online. The increased accessibility will be particularly handy for online education courses.

“This project marks an important step in the effort to make our unique archival resources available online,” says Abi Parker, Project Director.

KENTUCKY RESEARCH GOES GLOBAL

NEW DIGITAL PORTAL LAUNCHED BY UK AND WKU

A new digital portal that gives free access to research being produced in the Commonwealth of Kentucky was launched April 30, 2015.

Kentucky Research Commons (KRC) was launched (visit http://kentucky.researchcommons.org/) by the University of Kentucky and Western Kentucky University to highlight and make research by faculty available to students, legislators, funding bodies, Kentuckians, and others in the United States and beyond through an open access platform.

The site brings together contents from the repositories of Asbury Theological Seminary, Bellarmine University, Eastern Kentucky University, University of Kentucky, University of Louisville, and Western Kentucky University.

KRC hosts scholarly research, ranging from faculty publications, to online peer-reviewed journals, to conferences and events, to electronic theses and dissertations, to special archival collections. The content can be searched by institution, discipline, or author. Search terms can also be used for easy discovery.

The portal features a real-time map that allows a visitor to the portal to visualize when and where content is being downloaded. A site visitor can see the global interest in research from Kentucky institutions.

To get the new UN and PW, log into your TigerNet Account. Then click on the Library tab at the top of the page. The Username and Password for Off-Campus box will be on the page.

REMEMBER! ! ! ! ! ! !

Remember that the Library Username and Password for access to library resources from off-campus will change at the beginning of the semester.

I NEED . . .

A STUDENT BEGINS RESEARCH IN MONTGOMERY LIBRARY

The typical scenario is that a student, realizing that his or her research paper is due in two days, comes bopping into Montgomery Library desperately asking, “Where can I find books or articles on this topic?” Or, “My professor wants me to find articles from a peer reviewed journal. I don’t know where to look. Help me!!!”

A service offered by the library staff can help students, who will have to write a research paper, relieve some of their anxieties in starting their research. The library’s staff offers library instruction to any class. The instruction sessions include search techniques in the library’s many databases, information on the kinds of databases available, how to search for print books located on the shelves, and encouragement to register for check-out privileges.

A student may not remember exactly what they should do when he or she realizes that time is running short, but he or she will remember that they can come to the library for help. There are four staff members who are trained in research techniques.

Kay Alston, Glen Taul, or Abi Parker will either come to a professor’s class or the instructor can come to the library’s classroom. Instruction is also offered virtually. Tim Hooper gives instruction for library research at Campbellsville University’s satellite campuses and to Distance Education students. Appointments for library instruction on the Main Campus can be made by contacting:
